New Divisional Technical Manager brings Sector experience to SES

Leading building services solutions provider, SES, is delighted to announce the appointment of its new Divisional Technical Manager for the West & Central division, Andrew Murfin.

Andrew's early career saw him working as a Design Manager for leading contractors in the Pharmaceutical sector. He has also spent time with a number of consultancies around the country, working on projects for both the public and private sectors.

Andrew joined SES at the beginning of June and is based in the company's Manchester office. He is responsible for managing the technical content of all projects that have a design element to them, in order to ensure compliance, paying particular attention to the sustainable elements of each scheme.

Robert Doherty, Divisional Director for SES's West & Central Division, said: "I'm delighted to welcome Andrew to SES. With his strong background in design and technical services and his firm understanding of our key sectors, he'll be able to offer our clients bespoke design solutions to their projects and will be a real asset to the SES team."

Andrew, 43, enjoys fell walking and is a keen golfer.
