SES continues to grow with new office in Central London

New SES office in central London

To support the ongoing development and growth of our London & South East division, and our longer term commitment to working in London, SES has today announced that it is set to open a new office in Central London.

Ideally situated to take advantage of the various transport links from Kings Cross and St Pancras Stations, SES will open the doors of 8-14 Crinan Street, London, N1 on the 15th March 2010.

The new office has been fitted out to accommodate all the functions of our operational business and support teams that are working on a number of projects in and around the London area. These projects include the newly secured work at Woolwich Civic Centre, Gracechurch Street and the Yell Group's new Head Office in Reading.

Derek Joiner, Divisional Director for SES London & South East said, "Our new office is a major investment for us and reflects our continued commitment to providing exceptional support to our clients. The decision to establish a permanent base in Central London will enable us to better respond to the demands and needs of our clients in the South and builds upon our strategic plans for continued growth in the markets we serve."

SES is a national provider of Building Services Solutions delivered through our Regional Offices at London, Slough, Manchester, Coventry, Leeds, York, Sheffield, Newcastle and Swindon.
